Laser Dermatology Treatments

Many prospective cosmetic procedure clients want to know what is the best laser dermatology treatment available. With laser dermatology treatments advancing at such an astonishing rate, it seems like every month we read about the latest and greatest laser treatment. However, the answer to which is the best laser treatment depends primarily on the type of results a patient wants to achieve. Cosmetic dermatology lasers are finely tuned instruments that are calibrated to target specific issues. A patient suffering from sun spots requires a completely different laser dermatology treatment from someone who wants to firm up sagging skin. Some of the best laser dermatology treatments on the market today that treat these issues include the Titan, Laser Genesis, the Pearl and IPL photofacial.

To decide which of the above lasers is the best dermatology treatment option for your skin condition, visit a cosmetic surgeon specializing in laser treatments for a consultation. Qualified clinics such as the Renaissance Laser and Vein Institute are thoroughly knowledgeable and highly trained in providing the best laser dermatology treatments. This allows them to make accurate recommendations on the best course of laser treatment for a patient's particular dermatological malady. The Titan laser, for example, provides fantastic results for people who want firmer skin. A few treatments can provide dramatic improvement in the sagging areas of the neck and underneath the chin. Laser Genesis, on the other hand, targets fine lines on the face as well as skin texture to create smoother, more youthful skin. The Pearl is a powerful combination of age-fighting dermatology laser and microdermabrasion for fast improvement in skin's texture and fine lines. Finally, IPL (intense-pulsed light) laser treatments target skin hyper pigmentation including sun spots, melasma, age spots and broken capillaries to even out skin tone.
